WATER IS KING.

The Irrigation Age is its discusison of the water problem in the arid States will not do so until he regards it as a water systems by the farmers themselves. It argues that the sale of the canal to the farmers, and the transfer of its management to their hands, would not only provide a water supply at a reasonable first costs; it would insure its economical management thereafter and relieve them from the annoyance and exactions so frequently experienced where capals are owned and managed by others than the users of its water.

The experience of the arid States shows with scarcely an exception, that carals owned and operated by the farmers living below them, are operated at far less cost than are canals owned and operated by water companies. Under the one system controversies are of rare secursence, and litigation is almost unknown, while under the other there is a direct conflict of interest, the farmer desiring the greatest possible supply at the least cost, while the canal company s subject to the constant temptation to raise the rates and wring from the user

This is not alone the experience of the arid States of this country, the history of the old irrigation States is equally emphatic as to the danger of placing the use and control of the water supply in separate hands. The system proposed makes al rights to water for irrigation inhere in efforts as a "sure preventative" have the land on which it is used. Water rights would go with land titles, and no inducement or opportunity be extended to the formation of compan es to secure control of streams. The evils attendant upon the separation of land and water are too serious to be disregarded. If

Are those disorders which, beginning with an apparently trivial inactivity of the kidneys or bladder, terminates in Bright's disease, diabetes and cystitis. The first two not only interrupt the functions of the renal organs, but des troy their structure with as much certainty as tuberculor consumption does that of the lungs. Hostetter's Stomach Bitterss is an excellent diuretic, promoting the activity of these organs without over exciting them, thus averting the deadly maiadies in which their inaction is so prone to culminate. The removal from the blood of impurities which the kidneys should but do not when inactive, secrete, is another beneficent effect of this incomparable medicated stimulant and depurent. The Bitters is, in all cases, too, a fine restorative of vigor and aid to digestion, remedies malarial disease, and banishes liver complaint and constinution.

Governor Ahumada of Chihuahua, who has a better understanding of the whole situation than any other man living, perhaps, is said to regard it as a trifling affair, already on its last legs and bordering on complete collapse.

> THE DISTRESS AND SUFFERING the inexcusable revolt has already brought upon thousands of innocent women and children, and that it is sure to entail upon thousands more, is the darkest shadow in the picture. From among the two thousand or more inhabitants of the town of Guerrera the last woman and child fled early last week. Many have fled from Santo Tomas and other pueblos and haciendas in that region and from isolated places even as far east as Cusihuiriachic. These have taken to the flinty roads and rough mountain trail hurriedly, most of them barefooted and half clad, with little or no food and without means to purchasing any, and these affrighted women and delicate children are struggling painfully over wide stretches of desert toward the city of Chihuahua- leaving hope behind and with naught but despair and famine in front. The only ones along the route to whom they might appeal for help are as deeply steeped in poverty as themselves, and when they reach the city of safety they will find its few inhabitants who are able to help heavily overtaxed by the expenses of the poor among them .- El Paso Times.
